

Journal of Management Studies 0:0 Month 2024

doi:10.1111/joms.13075

Guaranteed Basic Income from the Perspective of Self-Determination Theory

Joshua L. Howard

Monash University

ABSTRACT In capitalistic societies the concepts of income and labour are inseparable, and as such, providing all citizens with an unconditional living wage is a contentious issue. Capitalist ideals that emphasize individual effort, competition, and financial prosperity have spurred tremendous economic growth but underestimate human motivation and have implications for

